Always combine temporary, transient information and primary or long-lived data in the same document

Select one:

- ○ True
- ✅ False

The level of language you will use and the basic type of report you will write can be specified only after analyzing the key parameters.

Select one:

- ✅ True
- ○ False

Always tell readers things that they don't need to know

Select one:

- True
- ✅ False

Avoid putting different kinds of information or information about different subjects in a single report; instead write separate reports

Select one:

✅True

○ False

A report is a sink for you to dump all the information you happen to have into.

Select one:

- True
- ✅ False

The report key parameters combined give you the report design specifications

Select one:

✅ True

○ False

The formulated answer to the classic question of journalistic writing: WHY? is to specify your type of information

Select one:

- ○ True
- ✅ False

Secondary audience is directly affected by the information you convey

Select one:

- True
- ✅ False

Don’t try to make a report or a letter or a memo serve double duty

Select one:

✅ True

○ False

Your purpose in writing is your reader's purpose and your goal is to meet your reader's needs

Select one:

✅ True

○ False